What is Breckinridge running for When he was put on the truck, he was set up to be knocked down. Not a State could be take from Lincoln, and no man has sup posed he could take one from that day to this. He will not gel in any free State hall the vote Fillmore got in 1856. This was just as well known at Baltimore as it will be after the vote is cast in November. His friends hoped he would carry all the slave States; and what if he did? He would not he constitutionally President of the United States. It would, however, have made a pretext for the cherished purpose of the men who originated the movement. It is plain, now, that he will carry very few of the slave States; not over two or three; the majority, at least, he cannot carry. His friends say he is not a sectional candidate; and they parade their platform before the country: prove, by their "inexorable logic," that it is constitutional, and then with a tone of defiance, ask if the Constitution can Lincoln and his friends relieve him from the charge of being a sectional candidate by the same process of "inexorable logic" A great fact, however, stares both in the face and that is, that few in one section if the Union accept the "inexorable logic" of the other. The logic of each is strong or weak, according as it is used on one side or the other of a geographical line They both use geographical logic-inexotable, according to the latitude. Property in slaves exist everywhere in the territory of the United States, say one party, and must be maintained there; property exists nowhere in the territory of the United States, say the other. Congress is charged with the duty winter the and of protecting slavery everywhere, say one: longress is charged with the duty of prohibiting it everywhere, say the other. They both employ that "inexorable logic" suited to their latitude. This logic on one side of

Mr. Breckinridge can get no votes North; Mr. Lincoln nenc South. The misfortune ay to November max, and contains cau possibly get votes enough, whilst Breckinridge is in a hopeless minority, if he could get all the friends hoped for at the start.

What sensible object, then, is Breckinridge running for" We see an object, and that is o unite the Son h against a united North. This is the hope of Yancey & Co., and contributes directly and effectually to their end, if the success hoped for once could be ob tained. And, then, what? - The election of Lincolu is provided for, and that is a sufficient reason for a dissolution of the Union. They make the reason themselves by their own acts; they bring about what they might have prevented, and then intend to use the result of their own conduct to justify a pronunciamento, after the fashion of Mexico. Senator Hunter, as and E. h. Brancies, with board in-Seunter Hunter, at the Charlottesville "Fellow-cit zen in my epinim we scan! here the evening to vindicate the only pinion and principles ap
